Spangled Banner” and “God Bless America” by the Canandaigua Academy Chamber Choir.

Those nominated include veterans of World War II, Korea, Vietnam and more recent conflicts. They include all five branches of the military (Army, Navy, Air Force, Marine Corps, and Coast Guard).

“You all have one thing in common. You were willing to lay down your lives for the common good,” Helming said.

Among the nominees is First Lt. Donald Barton of Canandaigua, who was lead bombardier on 12 of 19 successful B-17 combat missions in World War II. On his 20th mission, in July 1944, his plane was shot down over Germany and four of his crew members were killed.

Barton was captured and a prisoner of war for nearly a year. He later received the Purple Heart and Prisoner of War Medal.

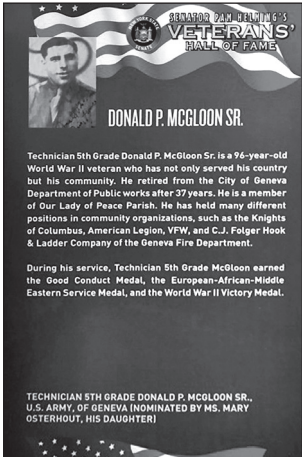

Following his military service, Barton earned his doctorate in genetics from Cal Berkeley and was a professor at Cornell University. He was later director of the state Ag Experiment Station in Geneva for 22 years.

Another nominee is Yeoman 3rd Class Rena Nessler of Geneva, who served in the Navy during Vietnam and joined American Legion Winnek Post in 1980. She later held a number of leadership positions at the local, county and district level before being elected New York State Legion commander in 2017, the first woman to hold the position.

Also nominated was Sgt. 1st Class Stephan Sciarabba of Geneva, who served in the Army from 1978-99 including deployments to Grenada, Panama and Kuwait. The recipient of numerous medals, he is one of only a few people in the military to earn the three highest awards for rifle marksmanship.

While most of the nominees are still living, several others were nominated posthumously. They include World War II veterans Edward Devaney and Alfred Liberio of Geneva.

Everyone who attended Wednesday's ceremony received a commemorative booklet, which includes details on each nominee.

“Some of the stories are very moving, including personal struggles as well as examples of great courage and bravery,” Helming said.

“The sampling was done at the former airfield refueling site, at a fire training pad, and at a fire training pit area,” Battaglia said. “Special probes were used, and they found contamination of the groundwater at the fire training area, not at the old airfield.”

No current depot tenants use the groundwater as a source of drinking water. Rather, a public water supply is used, Battaglia said.

“The Army will do follow-up sampling in May to see if the contamination is getting off the depot property into properties outside the depot that use groundwater,” he said.

Battaglia said Earl Martin, who owns 7,000 acres of former depot land, has been informed of the sampling results. Battaglia said Martin plans to have any farm homestead or other users of water on his land hooked up to the

Groundwater plumes

According to the website www.dwa.gov.za, a groundwater contamination plume is a body of contaminated groundwater flowing from a specific source. The movement of the groundwater is influenced by such factors as local groundwater flow patterns, the character of the aquifer in which the groundwater is contained, and the density of contaminants. Contamination plumes are important because they can result in groundwater being less fit for use. The extent of the plume can be used to calculate the rate of contaminant migration.

Some areas of the depot have restrictions on using groundwater. A feasibility study of the situation will be presented to the state Department of Environmental Conservation and the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency by Friday.

Battaglia said a public hearing will be scheduled for any remedial plan that is deemed necessary.

The U.S. Department of Defense uncovered the depot's pollution problem during an investigation into 664 military sites nationwide that used fire-fighting foam. That foam is believed to be the source of the contamination.

Perfluorooctanoic acid also was used in making non-stick Teflon pots and pans, and stain-resistant carpets. The EPA requires water systems serving at least 10,000 people to test for perfluorooctanoic acid and perfluorooctane sulfonate when they exceed 70 parts per trillion combined in water samples.

The groundwater plumes would tend to migrate in a westerly direction toward the area Martin has designated for Amish and Mennonite farmsteads, Battaglia said.
